

Researching and teaching heterodox and pluralist economics - Network studio

We are researchers in educational sciences and ecological economics in Sweden with an interest in establishing a research environment that could be the home of courses on different levels, a research school and research projects in strands of economics that do not yet exist (in our geographical area). We also have a particular interest in researching and developing teaching in heterodox and pluralist economics.

We would like to meet at the Higher Education Summit to find allies with the same interests of researching both heterodox and pluralist economics and new ways of teaching economics, i.e. teaching that enable students to grasp with the complex and dynamic relationships between economic, social and ecological dimensions of sustainability.

Anyone with the same interests can join.

Pernilla Andersson and Lina Isacs